On the first of September 1939 millions of children were evacuated for their safety. After 1 day many of the parents wanted their children back but that was a bad idea because a couple days later lots of bombs hit London.

This is some children getting ready to be evacuated with their gas masks on just in case a bomb hit.

Some families didn't send their children to the country side that was a bad idea.

After Germany invaded Poland Germany declared war with England. On the first of September 1939 millions of children were evacuated. Some were evacuated to the country side and some were evacuated to Canada. The reason why some were sent to the country side was because if they bombed the area it will most likely to hit a big field and only one house and that would be a waste of a bomb.

The parents were given letters telling them what to pack by the government. When the train ride was over they were put in a line and chosen by their new family. Some of the children were not picked which is very sad.

The billeting officers told the children to prepare themselves to be with their evacuee family for a year.

Parents are unsure about sending their children to someone they don't know but they know they will be safer there.
